THE COMMITTEE of ARRANGEMENTS for

take place at the Academy of Muric in 14th-st. on THURS-DAY, the 18th inst.

Owing to the limited accommodations which the Academy affords, compared to those of Castle Garden, where it has taken place heretokes, the Committee have arranged for two definite series of entertainments on the day designated above; one in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the other in the evening at 7 o'clock. The same reason obliges them to charge on that occasion full price for the admission of children.

While the Committee, in view of the generous synapsthy which has always been manifested for the destitute and helpless little ones whom the Festival is designed to benefit, feel that a formal appeal is unnecessary, they take occasion to state that the condition of the Asylums is such as to require the immediate and energetic exertions of all their patrons. The past essenth has been one of the greatest embarrasement to the Managers, who have been constantly perplexed to provide not only for present and pressing wants, but to procuse means wherewith to satisfy obligations already incurred. The present moment finds the treasury empty, the institutions in cebt, creditors importunate, and the necessary supplies for Winter yet unprovided Under these circumstances they are again forced to appeal to the charity of the community which has so nobiy and liberally responded to every former appeal.

We have read this work, which claims to be a record of facts by an eye and ear witness, with thrilling interest at a single sitting. It deserves to be piaced in the same category with Uncle Tom's Cabin, though not so exclusively devoted to dineations of the slave system at the South. What higher panegyric can we bestow upon it?

"A blast, and a very furious one too against the Fugitive Slawe Law with a strong advocacy of the Maine Law by way of underpict.

"As a whole life in the South is fairly and benestly pictured, to our own knowledge, and the scenes and incidents are such as we have witnessed many a time in Virginia and Maryland, year age."

"A most intensely exciting book."

"The story is a most exciting one, well and powerfully written.

"The reader will recognize some of the characters portrayed, and probably find one that answers very well for Anthy Burns."

"No one can read it without being intensely interested."

[Chicago New Covenant.

"Written with distinguished ability." [Bosten Chronicle.

"We have no clue to the authorship of this remarkable story, which, whether a pure fertion, or, as it purports to be, a, record of face, cannot but become a work of no inconsiderable note."
